Miss Garrison has a soprano voice, while the music is written for contralto. The singer refused to attempt the music, fit her voice. Aghast, the conductor explained that the music was written be touched, but in the end the American prima donna had her way and then she proceeded to shock the conductor again by forcing him to change the tempo. She carried her revolution also to other operas produced in Berlin, where artists are being forced to accommodate their voices to the parts for the sake of the original scores.

Miss Garrison declares that German conductors are more careless than American conductors and give little attention to rehearsals, some times not requiring a single number to be repeated. She says she found the operatic stage in Germany in a serious condistage in Germany in a serious condi-tion with many leading artists fulfilling old contracts for an equivalent of 75 cents a performance, while according to cents a performance, while according to the modern scale stars are receiving the equivalent of $2 a night.

Chicago Opera Company Will Produce 'Snow Bird'

An opera composed by an American and presented by a cast of American singers is among the novelties which will be in repertoire of the Chicago Civic Opera Company this seacago Civic Opera Company this season, in keeping with its policy to encourage the production of native music drama. The work selected for presentation is "The Snow Bird." of which both the music and libretto were written by Theodore Stearns, Chicago composer and conductor. Its presentation at the Auditorium will mark the world premiere of the work.

Mr. Stearns is not a novice at operatic composition. When a youth he was engaged as a conductor in Bavaria and in connection with this work devoted himself to composition. Several operas resulted, one of which, "Endymion," was presented with great success in Wuertzberg and Hofgeismar. He has also completed the plano score of another full length opera entitled "Co-o-za," which will probably be given production in this country as soon as the composer has completed the orchestration.

"The Snow Bird" is a fantasy the locale of which is Mongolian Siberia. Th action is supposed to take place in the year 900, and depicts an episode in the life of a young Tartar prince who is living the life of a hermit. He rescues Snow Bird, a Tartar maiden, from shipwreck and falls in love with her. The romance of the story is appealing and the musical setting is in keeping with its mystic beauty. It includes a "dream ballet."

Historians and archmologists are in terested in recent discoveries under the cathedral in Lisiuex, Normandy. During repairs a mason's pick struck a large stone slab, which, when removed, disclosed a deep well. Five years ago mencathedral archives, but no one was able to find the exact emplacement. A manuscript said the well was sealed in 1687. The slab, originally placed over the tomb of a canon of Lisieux, bears traces of an inscription in Gothic. Dragging the well the discoverers found a jeweler's weight, bearing the efficient of Ferdinand V., King of Aragon, and Isabella, his wife.
